- A) Although windows 2000 and NT4 have a number of features in common, the former is more flexible, safer and easier of maintenance, and in other ways too, quite different.
- B) Windows 2000 is certainly different in several aspects from NT4 with the result that it is less rigid, safer and upkeep is less complex; but these changes do not by any means constitute the main goal.
- C) The main aim with Windows 2000 was to give it certain features like flexibility, security and ease of maintenance so as to distinguish it from NT4.
- D) The main goal in producing Windows 2000 was not to distinguish it from NT4 by making it less rigid, safer and easier of upkeep, but those are certainly some of its features.
- E) Flexibility, security and ease of maintenance are some of the features that distinguish Windows 2000 from NT4 and these constitute the main aim in producing it.

59. The creation of a single European state, towards which the single currency is a major step, will serve only to further the scope and power of large corporations. ____ . Undoubtedly, the single currency will significantly accelerate the process of economic globalisation, but the consequences could prove disastrous.

- A) Similarly, small businesses and communities will have no voice in this corporate Europe
- B) Moreover, the further away government drifts from the communities it is supposed to serve, the less accountable it will become
- C) The ongoing standardisation of European culture, taste and regulations can only be achieved with the unanimous support of all Europeans
- D) It is unlikely that ordinary people will ever achieve access to the working strategies of the institutions that govern them
- E) It is, indeed, these corporations which have called most persistently for a single currency

60. Why are organisations important? ____ . The working force, which means the bulk of the adult population, spends more than a third of its waking hours in the organisations by which it is employed. The life of the child takes place to almost an equal extent in the environment of the school organisation.

- A) The answer is that organisations are important because people spend so much of their time in them
- B) The obvious answer might be that it is organisations that give employment to the workforce
- C) Housewives are obviously less affected by organisations than working women in full-time employment
- D) Influence processes can be specific or they can be diffuse
- E) It is often argued that organisations have a profound influence on human behaviour

61. The anthology has been edited by two very fine poets, but the result is disappointing. Quite simply, it fails to excite. ____ . Further, the selection itself is overburdened by the need to support this thesis.

- A) Each new anthology is, in a way, a new effort to reassess the past
- B) The bibliographical material, moreover, is correspondingly informative
- C) The selection also includes, besides old favourites, many delightful poems that have been unfairly overlooked
- D) The introduction is without originality and indeed says nothing
- E) The introduction is heavy and the thesis that poetry has been fully "democratised" since World War I, is overstated

62. In certain countries, air pollution from road traffic kills more people per year than fatal car crashes. According to a study carried out in Sweden, traffic fumes cause lung cancer and, hence, a high rate of mortality. ____ . People who have only lived in areas of heavy traffic for ten years are 20 per cent more likely to develop the illness.

- A) On the contrary, the effects of the pollution caused by road traffic have proved to be fatal
- B) Researchers have found that those living in areas of high density traffic for a period of thirty years are 40 per cent more likely to contract the disease
- C) A lot of people are hospitalised as a result of accidents on roads and this puts a great strain on health resources
- D) Clearly, further measures are needed to reduce air pollution caused by traffic, as well as that caused by industry
- E) Similar studies have been carried out in other countries with similar results

63. ____ . This, we are assured, will enable it to become more "efficient". All affiliated sectors are targeted: hospital care and other care services, ambulance services, care for the aged, social benefits, and the highly-lucrative area of plastic surgery. Patients would henceforth become customers, and hospitals health-care supermarkets.

- A) The medico-pharmaceutical industry is one of the world's leading business sectors and one with an enormous potential for growth and profits in the new century
- B) In fact, to subject healthcare to the laws of the market can only lead to increased inequality and tension in the country
- C) After the privatisation of telecommunications and postal services, it is now the turn of the health sector to be opened up to competition and eventual take-over by corporations
- D) The service sector, in which health-care is included, is as vast as it is undefined
- E) For over fifty years, access to health-care for all has come to be regarded as a fundamental human right in many countries

64. In 1906 the US authorities declared cocaine illegal and then prohibited its import. ____ . In financial, artistic and political milieu in the US, it is regarded as synonymous with opulence and distinction. Therefore, its desirability has launched a fabulous business known as narco traffic.

- A) At present, the US market almost entirely absorbs Latin American drug production
- B) Towards the end of the nineteenth century, cocaine consumption spread through the upper classes of both Europe and the US
- C) In Peru, for example, the cocaine industry occupies 15 per cent of the active labour force and reports a yearly income of one billion US dollars
- D) In spite of the prohibition, cocaine has all through the century been much in demand
- E) The US approach to the popularity of cocaine is a classic example of the misrepresentation of the real problem

71. Somehow a week has gone by before you learn that a very good friend has suddenly been taken ill. When you do learn you immediately resolve to visit her that same evening, but in the meanwhile you send flowers and with them a note saying:

- A) Why didn't you stay in hospital a little longer? You'd have been well-looked after there.
- B) Do you try to cheer up! I'm sure it's not so bad! I'll try to come and see you tomorrow evening.
- C) No one told me you were ill till this morning. I'll drop by when I can. Take your medicines like a good girl!
- D) I only learned this morning that you'd been ill. I'll come round after work today. Till then take care!
- E) Can't wait to see you! I'll come round later. Let me know if there's anything you need.

72. A friend is planning to do a make-over in her sitting-room, and is talking about brilliant lime-green walls and a bright blue fitted carpet. It's going to cost a lot of money and you think she'll get tired of the scheme before long and regret having spent so much money on it. So you try to put her off and say rather reasonably:

- A) it's not the sort of colour scheme I'd choose, but it's you who will be living with it, not me!
- B) it might look fine so long as the curtains are a natural shade.
- C) That's a ridiculous idea! Forget it.
- D) Bright colours are terribly popular at present, so you'll be right in the fore of fashion.
- E) Can't you bring some bright colours into the room with cheaper articles like cushions and rugs?

73. The new secretary has made rather a lot of mistakes during her first week in the office, so a lot of people are criticising her. You think that she'll be fine once she has settled in properly and learned the routine. So you say:

- A) The worst thing about her is her manner, and, of course, the way she dresses!
- B) Let her see how displeased we are with her.
- C) Give her a chance to get used to the work and to what we expect of her.
- D) It's her typing that is bad, and I don't think that will improve.
- E) She was highly recommended. Let's just hope she does better next week.

74. You are buying a book for a colleague who is retiring. It's not likely that she already has the book you have chosen for her but you want to be quite sure the shop will let her exchange it for another if she wants to. So you say to the shopkeeper:

- A) She reads a lot, so she may have read it already.
- B) If she brings it back you will refund the money, won't you?
- C) If she should want to change it, I presume you would allow her to, wouldn't you?
- D) If she's already read it she can give it to someone else, can't she?
- E) Do I have to bring the receipt with me if I want to change it?

75. You have a great deal of work to do on a report this morning and are determined to be left to do it undisturbed, no matter who may call. You instruct your secretary to this effect and say:

- A) If anyone calls let them ring back after 3 o'clock unless it's very urgent
- B) You are to put through no telephone calls whatsoever this morning, not even if it's the managing director himself.
- C) I want to finish this report today, so don't put any calls through, unless my wife rings.
- D) Remember, no calls please, unless it's the boss himself.
- E) If the managing director should ring please tell him I've nearly finished the report.

76. A friend has been having a lot of problems, at work and at home. She is badly in need of a change and you decide to give her an evening out. So you say:

- A) After work, let's go and get something to eat, and then go to a cinema.
- B) If there had been any good films we could have gone to the cinema.
- C) I'm terribly busy next week, but I ought to be free on Saturday.
- D) Mary wants us to go around to her place this evening; but I'm not keen to go.
- E) The concert last night was excellent. You should have made the effort and gone.

77. Laura: They are spending awful lot on advertising their new range of hair-care!

David: _____

Laura: What? A poor product?

David: Yes; very often it does anyhow.

- A) Really? I hadn't noticed any.
- B) I suppose they need to. There are so many hair-care products.
- C) And you know what excessive advertising usually means, don't you?
- D) Well, they haven't produced a new range for a long time.
- E) They don't need to. Their products are well-known and much appreciated.

78. Andrew: Why, if inflation is falling, has the Bank of England raised interest rates?

Gerald: _____

Andrew: Well, yes; I suppose that makes sense.

Gerald: And moreover, the present situation is such as to justify a small rise now.

- A) I didn't realise it had. We'd better see what "The Financial Times" says about it.
- B) Well, like you I can only make a guess; but it seems to me there is something odd going on.
- C) To tell you the truth, I'm pleased. There'll be a bit more in my bank account by the end of the year.
- D) Oh, it constantly goes up and down without apparently any good reason.
- E) I suppose because it is concerned, not about present day inflation, but about what it will be two years ahead.

79. Martin: Their latest advertising campaign is scandalous.

Edward: Yes. But technically they are within the law.

Martin: _____

Edward: So do I. But there's nothing we can do about it.

- A) I very much doubt it. In fact, I'm all for filing a complaint against them.
- B) We can launch a similar campaign.
- C) Are you quite sure about that?
- D) Still, I regard such tactics as completely unethical.
- E) We must take some action. What do you suggest?

80. Jenny: How was the journey?

Brian: Quite pleasant, really. There was a gorgeous sunset.

Jenny: "Sunset," did you say? Brian

Brian: _____

- A) The sun sets later here than in the East.
- B) Yes. I rarely get the chance to see a sunset, so I thoroughly enjoyed watching it
- C) If you want a really good sunset, there have to be some clouds in the sky.
- D) Yes. I find these short days and long nights extremely depressing.
- E) I suppose I did. But I didn't really mean to.

81. Matthew: Did you go to the theatre last night to see Rod Davis' new play?

Carol: _____

Matthew: Why do you say that?

Carol: Well, I'd never heard of him before, so I wasn't expecting much.

- A) Yes I did, And it was surprisingly good.
- B) No, My father suddenly arrived in town, so I spent the evening with him.
- C) Yes. And it was as boring as his previous play!
- D) No. I go tonight. And I'm looking forward to it.
- E) I couldn't go so I gave my ticket to my sister.

82. Adrian: Are you going to that cocktail party this evening?

Jennifer: Yes I am. It will be held in the garden, you know.

Adrian: _____

Jennifer: How true! I hadn't thought of that.

- A) Will you be going by car?
- B) Are Jane and Mary coming too?
- C) The Marsden still haven't decided whether to go or not.
- D) That's nice. We won't be in a room full of smoke.
- E) Let's go together. Can you come for me at 6 o'clock?

Restorative justice does not ask 'how do we punish?', but instead asks 'how do we get people to take responsibility for what they have done?'. Paying a fine, or even going to prison are easy options for some people. They are all ways that offenders can avoid taking responsibility, because in this way they never have to face the human reality of what they have done. Prisons have been called "universities for criminals". Young people go in for unpaid fines, often for victimless crimes, and they come out with a degree in burglary or worse. I am not saying that the answer is to tear down all prisons. Far from it. There are people who are dangerous to society, who the community will want to keep locked up. Prison can also be part of a sentencing package under restorative justice. But the vast majority of people in prison are not violent, and do not need to be there. What they do need is to be brought face to face with the human reality of the harm they have caused, and they must be given an opportunity to rectify

83. In the opinion of the author, prisons ____ .

- A) teach people to become better citizens
- B) serve no useful purpose whatsoever
- C) should be remodelled on the lines of universities and polytechnics
- D) should largely be reserved for violent people who constitute a threat to society
- E) are essential as more and more violence occurs in society

84. According to the writer, such a traditional punishment as fining ____ .

- A) helps to keep the crime-rate down
- B) actually helps offenders to avoid facing the fact that they have hurt society
- C) has been shown to be far more effective than imprisonment
- D) is highly effective if the offenders are young
- E) is regarded as a harder option than imprisonment

85. According to the passage, restorative justice ____ .

- A) regards most criminals as not being responsible for the crimes they have committed
- B) is only concerned with punishment when the criminal has proved violent
- C) concentrates on criminal acts in which there is no victim
- D) is too idealised and has little chance of working successfully
- E) is less concerned with punishment than with helping the offender to become a better citizen

In the coming weeks, wine makers north of the equator will oversee the harvesting and fermenting of the first vintage of the millennium. But long before the finished product reaches the shelves - before it even makes it out of the barrel, in some cases - samples will be offered to exporters and distributors. A select group of wine critics will also be given a taste. Most will record their impressions in the extravagant prose that wine journalists unfortunately love to use. Others will go one step further and assign numerical grades. These days a high score is more effective than mere praise. It can make a comparatively unknown wine into a highly desirable one that everyone is seeking to buy.

86. According to the passage, before the new season's wines even reach the shops, wine critics will have ____ .

- A) tasted samples and described or graded them
- B) suggested suitable prices for each type
- C) bought up large quantities of what they think will sell well
- D) advised producers on the fermenting process for the next year's vintage
- E) compared their impressions with those of other wine critics

87. In the opinion of the writer, most of the wine journalists ____ .

- A) dislike the practice of awarding wines numerical grades
- B) generally use too many exotic words and literary expressions
- C) have very little influence on the public's choice of wine
- D) are less influential than distributors in the business of buying and selling of wines
- E) should be consulted at all stages of the wine-making process

88. It is pointed out in the passage that the practice of awarding numerical grades to wines ____ .

- A) is not as reliable or satisfactory as the practice of describing wines
- B) is not at all popular among exporters and distributors
- C) has had a truly amazing effect on wine sales
- D) means that little known wines never get a chance to be known
- E) is rapidly giving way to the system of verbal description

One never finishes learning about art. There are always new things to discover. Great works of art seem to look different each time one stands before them. They seem to be as inexhaustible and unpredictable as real human beings. It is an exciting world of its own with its own strange laws and its own adventures. Nobody should think he knows all about it, for nobody does. Nothing, perhaps, is more important than just this: that to enjoy these works we must have a fresh mind, one which is ready to catch every hint and to respond to every hidden harmony: a mind, most of all that has not been dulled by the terminology and ready-made phrases of art appreciation. It is infinitely better not to know anything about art than to have the kind of half-knowledge which makes for snobbishness. The danger is very real.

89. According to the passage, great works of art are, in a way, like real people ____ .

- A) and we can expect to like them for some reasons, dislike them for others
- B) because there is a lot to learn about them before we finally know them
- C) and one needs a special vocabulary if one is to discuss them effectively
- D) because they can surprise us and give us something new each time we face them
- E) though, naturally, they are incapable of change

90. The writer feels that, if we are to enjoy works of art, we must ____ .

- A) concentrate on the ones that appeal to us and ignore those that don't
- B) learn everything there is to learn about art
- C) keep finding new works of art to look at and compare them with our old favourites
- D) look at them again and again until we have seen and understood everything about them
- E) come to them without preconceived ideas and with a readiness to respond to whatever they have to offer

91. In the opinion of the writer ____ .

- A) the world of art is more exciting than the real world
- B) the clichés of art appreciation are extremely dangerous and likely to stand in the way of genuine appreciation
- C) it is easy for everyone to appreciate great art
- D) everyone can and should acquire some kind of half-knowledge of art
- E) it is not advisable to keep going back to a work of art until we have exhausted all it has to say to us

92-94 soruları, aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

In theory, the multimedia age should be killing off bookshops. Who still has time to read books, what with surfing the Internet, viewing scores of new digital television channels, and putting in ever-longer hours at work? And presumably those few people who do still read books will be buying them on the Internet. After all, Amazon, a bookseller, is the most cited example of a successful online retailer. So much for the theory. What about the practice? This week the largest bookshop in Britain opened up in the old Simpson's of Piccadilly in London. With 265,000 titles and 1.5 million books, the new branch of Waterstone's stretches over seven floors. A department store, which once sold everything from sushi to plus-fours, is now devoted entirely to one product - books. The new Waterstone's is almost next door to Hatchards, a mere five-storey bookshop, with a well-established clientele, and two smaller bookshops. It is also less than a mile from Borders, another huge bookstore in Oxford Street.

92. The passage suggests that, in this world of technological advance one might, in theory, expect that ____ .

- A) Internet, among other things, would make book shops obsolete
- B) Internet would prove a serious rival to television
- C) smaller bookshops would be brought up by larger ones
- D) Internet book retailers like Amazon would find few customers
- E) new digital television channels have little chance of success

93. In the passage, we are given a great deal of information about the new Waterstone's bookshop, ____ .

- A) together with the number and quality of the staff employed there
- B) including the exact postal address
- C) and the incredible variety of second hand books to be found there is given special emphasis
- D) but it is the original use of floor space that receives special attention
- E) including the fact that the premises once belonged to a department store that sold literally every type of goods

94. As if to emphasise his own surprise, the writer makes the point that the new Waterstone's bookshop ____ .

- A) is designed and run like a department store
- B) has deprived neighbouring bookshops of a lot of their trade
- C) plans to open yet another branch in Oxford Street
- D) is situated in a neighbourhood of well-established bookstores
- E) is not likely to attract many customers

95-97 soruları, aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

The seventeenth-century scientist Francis Bacon was the first to insist that science be methodically separated from values so as to make it truly 'neutral', or objective. In reality, he did nothing of the sort. His 'scientific knowledge', instead of being value-free, set out explicitly and purposefully to give humanity power over nature. 'Truth and utility are perfectly identical,' he wrote in his "Novum Organum", and 'that which is most useful in practice is most correct in theory'. In effect, he merely replaced the old 'subjective' values of 'good' and 'evil' with the values of 'useful' and 'useless', or more precisely 'of contributing or not contributing to man's domination over or transformation of the natural world'. There were to be no limits to this transformation. His goal was explicitly stated. It was to 'achieve all things achievable'. At least he was honest enough to admit the fact. Modern science has followed Bacon's lead exactly, but does not admit it.

95. According to the author, the broad goals of modern scientists are identical with those of Bacon, ____ .

- A) except that they regard nothing as 'useless'
- B) only they avoid saying so
- C) although Bacon never actually discussed goals
- D) and even more ambitious
- E) but they consider him too subjective in his outlook

96. It is argued in the passage that though Bacon was determined to make science objective and value-free, ____ .

- A) he knew he was setting himself an impossible task
- B) this was impossible as truth and utility are inseparable
- C) he did not want man to have dominion over nature
- D) he was himself greatly influenced by the concepts of right and wrong
- E) he actually simply substituted one set of values for another

97. We understand from the passage that Bacon regarded science as a means to ____ .

- A) establish what was useful and what true
- B) overcome such subjective values as 'good' and 'evil'
- C) protect the natural world and so preserve it
- D) give man power over nature so he could benefit from it
- E) keep the natural world unchanged and unspoilt

98-100 soruları, aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

If a greater proportion of the food people eat were to be locally produced, this would be of great benefit to the farmer. A mix of local, regional, national, and international production would still be available; indeed, the goal would not be to put an end to the international trade in food, but to avoid transporting food thousands of miles when it could instead be produced next door. Such a shift would help revitalise rural economies ruined by the global economy. Less money would go into the hands of corporate middlemen, and far more would remain in the hands of farmers. This would especially be the case with the direct marketing of food via farmers' markets and farm stands and other forms of community supported agriculture. If farmers were not impelled to specialise their production in a few global commodities, the trend towards ever larger and more highly mechanised farms would slow down. Moreover, since small farms use a proportionally higher amount of human labour than mechanised inputs, a return to smaller farms would help bring back some of the 700.000 farm jobs the UK has lost during the last half-century of agricultural progress.

98. It is pointed out in the passage that it would be to the advantage of the farmer and the rural economy at large if ____ .

- A) people were to eat locally produced food more often
- B) the sale of farm products were in the hands of corporate middlemen
- C) the advantages of a global economy were better appreciated
- D) the practice of direct marketing of food at farmers' markets were forbidden
- E) the marketing of all food products were at a national or international level

99. According to the author, farms are growing larger and more highly mechanised ____ .

- A) as this is the only sure way to make money out of farming
- B) as this is what the rural community wants
- C) since no one is willing to work on the land
- D) because imported foodstuffs are so much cheaper
- E) because farmers feel obliged to concentrate on a very few products for global markets

100. The author is opposed to the trend towards larger and more highly mechanised farms ____ .

- A) as they result in unnecessarily high food prices
- B) since the quality of food they produce is poor
- C) because it has resulted in a great many farm labourers losing their jobs
- D) though he admits the quality of food they produce is high
- E) though this is what the owners of small farms want
